

ESSENTIAL CIVIL WAR CURRICULUM

Matthew C. Hulbert (M.A., North Carolina State University, 2008) is a doctoral student in history at the University of Georgia that specializes in the intersection of Civil War memory and guerrilla warfare in Missouri. His article "Constructing Guerrilla Memory: John Newman Edwards and Missouri's Irregular Lost Cause," was recently featured in The Journal of the Civil War Era (March 2012). Additionally, articles concerning "guerrilla memory" are forthcoming from Civil War History and The Journal of the West. He currently serves as book review editor for The Civil War Monitor.