

ESSENTIAL CIVIL WAR CURRICULUM

Stephen Fox is a freelance historian from Boston and Silver City, New Mexico. He studied US history at Williams College and Brown University, where he got his Ph.D. in 1971. Two years of college teaching convinced him that he was not cut out for academic life, so he has worked as a freelance for the past four decades, making his living here and there. He has published books on William Monroe Trotter (the most militant black leader of the early 20th century), John Muir and the conservation movement, the advertising business, organized crime, major-league sports, transatlantic steamships of the 19th century, and Semmes and the Alabama. Stephen and his wife, Alexandra Todd, moved to New Mexico in 2008.
