

ESSENTIAL CIVIL WAR CURRICULUM

Brian K. Burton is a lifelong student of the Civil War, having been born near the site of the prison camp in Elmira, New York. After working in newspapers, radio, video production, and magazines, he earned his PhD in strategic management and philosophy from Indiana University. From there in 1995 he went to Western Washington University in Bellingham, where he was successively a professor of management, MBA Program director, associate dean, and dean of the College of Business and Economics. He currently is Associate Vice President for Academic Affairs at Western.